

Raven and Theo: Songs from the Heart

Green Apple Acres was a different world during the day than it was at night. During the day at Green Apple Acres there were people hustling and bustling, walking and running, coming and going. There were animals to be fed, horses to be turned out to grassy pastures, stalls to be cleaned. There were people sounds and animal sounds and machinery sounds. There were bumping and rattling sounds of cars on the stone lane, swooshing sounds of hay being thrown into stalls and plopping sounds of grain being dropped into feed buckets. As the sun traveled through the sky each day, from sunrise to sunset, there were lots of chores to do at Green Apple Acres.
